

Now Dig This: The Unspeakable Writings of Terry Southern, 1950-1995 (Paperback)

By Terry Southern

Grove Press / Atlantic Monthly Press, United States, 2002. Paperback. Condition: New. Reprint. Language: English . This book usually ship within 10-15 business days and we will endeavor to dispatch orders quicker than this where possible. Brand New Book. Acclaimed novelist, Beat godfather, prolific screenwriter, and one of the founders of New Journalism, as well as the only guy to wear shades on the Beatles Sgt. Pepper s cover, Terry Southern was an audacious original. Now Dig This is a journey through Terry Southern s America, from the buttoned-down 50s through the sexual revolution, rock n roll, and independent cinema (which he helped inaugurate by cowriting and producing Easy Rider), up to his death in 1995. It spans Southern s stellar career, from early short stories and a Paris Review interview with Henry Green, to his legendary Esquire piece covering the 1968 Chicago Democratic Convention with Jean Genet and William Burroughs and his equally infamous account of life neck-high in girls and cocaine aboard The Rolling Stones tour jet, to his memories of twentieth-century legends like Abbie Hoffman, Kurt Vonnegut, and Stanley Kubrick, with whom he wrote Dr. Strangelove. A voice electric with street rhythm and royal with offhand intellection...
