Excerpt from Canada in the Great World War, Vol. 1 of 6: An Authentic Account of the Military History of Canada From the Earliest Days to the Close of the War of the Nations This armour-clad white man was Samuel Champlain, the first European to behold the sheet of water which bears his name. In his journal he gives an account of what followed his appearance in front of the Iroquois war party. He writes: I looked at them, and they looked at me. When I saw them getting ready to shoot their arrows at us, I levelled my arquebuse, which I had loaded with four balls, and aimed straight at one of the three chiefs. The shot brought down two, and wounded another. On this, our Indians set up such a yelling that one could not have heard a thunderclap, and all the while the arrows flew thick on both sides. The Iroquois were greatly astonished and frightened to see two Of their men killed so quickly, in spite of their arrow-proof armour. As I was reloading, one of my companions fired...
