Nor was it lacking in those industrial enterprises that establish the character of a progressive and prosperous people. As early as 1810 it was known as an iron-producing State, second only to Pennsylvania. The cannon balls that were sent hurtling through the British ranks at New Orleans were molded in Dickson County, of Tennessee iron. The most active commerce of the Mississippi Valley found its center at Nashville. Politically the State was regarded as the most influential in the South, irnderthe leadership of such men as Jackson, Hugh L. White, Emerson, Houston, Bell, Polk, Johnson, Jones, Zollicofter, Cave Johnson, Heury, Hay ties, Gentry, Aaron V. Brown, Haskell, Neil S. Brown, and others its reputation for statesmanship and oratory reached the furthest couliues of...
