Jenna Taylor lives a postcard perfect life in the suburbs with her husband Mark and their two little girls, Maggie and Dora. But when Mark is shot one evening outside a Memphis strip club, Jennas world is blown to pieces. Forced by a shrinking bank account to accept her mother-in-laws offer of a free place to live, Jenna packs up and moves her young family to rural Tatum County. Here, Jenna must rely on Marks less-than-welcoming family as she struggles to make sense of life in the midst of tragedy. But will Jenna be able to put her life back together and start over Bidi Marshall, a crusty, in-your-face neighbor, pushes Jenna to move ahead with life while challenging Jennas understanding of what it means to truly love another. As Jenna adjusts to the slower pace and peculiar personalities of life in the country, she learns to live with her eyes and heart focused more on the people around her and less on her own grief. Yet she wonders, will anyone ever truly love her in return Slow Sun Rising is a story of resurrection, of letting go of the deadness of a self-centered heart to make room for loving others, of grieving the dead while learning to embrace the living. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
